Riccarda Zezza

Ashoka Fellow 2016, is redefining work-life balance through Maternity as a Master(s)

When you have such a dream, as I think we [social entrepreneurs] all have, it's so strong. It really gives you a lot of energy. But everyday you also ask yourself, "Am I crazy? What am I doing?" And you need to keep you vision very high. You need to look very far, because if you look too close, you're going to stop: you're going to feel like you can't do it.

And if someone like Ashoka selects you and they decide you are an Ashoka Fellow, somehow you feel a lot of energy added to you. On a personal level, it makes a huge difference. It gives you a lot of strength. The normal market, the normal economy is all the time doubting what you're doing. All the time telling you why it won't work. When someone like Ashoka comes in and says, 'What you are doing is really important and it can really change the world' - they tell you that you can really do it."

Anju Rani

Selected by the Youth Venture Program, this 15 year old is making her village child labor free

Ashoka helped me immensely. It is not only the way that I talk that has changed, it is also the way I think. Earlier, I thought that it was only me who was preoccupied with social problems. It was when I joined YV that I realized that there are other people who are also working towards solving such problems. There was a time when my plans were confined to my village. After YV, it is my dream to make the entire state of Haryana child labor free."
